Republican Ticket.

SANTA FE COUNTY.

T. B. CATRON, For member of the council of the 33d legislative assembly.
WILLIAM KILPATRICK, For members of the house of representatives, 23d legislative assembly.
JAMES D. HUGHES, For county commissioner 1st district.
J. T. McLAUGHLIN, For county commissioner 2d district.
AUGUSTIN MAESTAS, For county commissioner 3d district.
JOSE AMADO LUCERO, For probate judge.
ATANASIO ROMERO, For clerk of the probate court.
C. W. DUDROW, For sheriff.
TELESFORO RIVERA, For assessor.
FRITZ MULLER, For treasurer and ex-officio collector.
FACUNDO F. PINO, For superintendent of schools.
D. M. WHITE, For surveyor.

C. W. Dudrow is well and favorably known throughout the county and will make a successful race for sheriff. Paste this into your hat.

Captain Fritz Muller will continue to discharge the duties of collector in an acceptable and honest manner. That is as it should be.

Facundo F. Pino, as county superintendent of schools, has proven a good and faithful official. This is an undisputed fact. He should be re-elected by a handsome majority.

Judge Telesforo Rivera can be counted upon to do his duty as assessor, if elected, impartially and honestly and with justice to all concerned. Give him your vote on election day.

J. D. Hughes, J. T. McLaughlin and Augustin Maestas will perform the duties of county commissioners in strict accordance with law and for the best interests of the tax payers and county. They should be elected.

As probate judge, Hon. Amado Lucero will perform the duties of the office to the satisfaction of all concerned. This is an important office and the Republicans did well in nominating a straightforward and good man for the position. He should be elected.

Messrs. Victor Ortega and Wm. Kilpatrick, Republican nominees for the house of representatives from this county, are well fitted in every respect for the positions for which they are nominated. They should be elected.

If faithful and efficient service as a public official count in this county, and such ought to count, Mr. Atanasio Romero will be elected by a very substantial majority to the office of clerk of the probate court and county clerk of this county.

Really, the most funny thing ever brought forth in New Mexican politics is the Democratic claim that Mr. Ferguson had the cool schedule in the Dingley protective tariff law passed.

The Republicans of Santa Fe county are justly proud of the good record made by the Republican county administration since January 1, 1897, in the administration of county affairs. They have nominated a first class ticket, and it will be elected.

The Republican ticket of Santa Fe county is first class in every respect. It contains the names of clean, reputable and honorable men for the several county offices, such men and candidates as every patriotic, good and well meaning citizen can and ought to vote for.

The last week of the campaign opens in a flattering manner for the Republicans. Reports from every part of the territory show the Republican candidates are gaining strength with wonderful rapidity and that the voters have determined that no more 45 cent lambs and 55 steers are wanted in New Mexico.

D. M. White, the Republican candidate for surveyor of Santa Fe county, is a young man who is well and favorably known by the voters, and his qualifications for the office are of the best. In his charge the responsible office of county surveyor will be free from errors affecting titles and measurements of lands, which are of great interest to the property owners.

The citizens of this county know that the Republican party, if its ticket shall be successful, and there is no doubt of this, will give them another administration of county affairs that will be what it should be and will be best for the county. The record of the party since it has had charge of Santa Fe county affairs, during the term of the present officials, proves this. The citizens of this county will not injure themselves if they do not keep a Republican administration in power.

Mr. Perea's campaign is going on nicely, although Mr. Ferguson does not like Mr. Perea's conduct and in his speeches says that Mr. Perea is opposed to the native people of New Mexico, to the Catholic religion and a lot of similar rot. Mr. Ferguson's posing as the champion of the native people of the territory and of the Catholic religion in his speeches, when the Democratic campaign managers and newspapers are making a fight for him on the race issue is supremely ridiculous and too transparent to fool anybody. Life is too short.

Hon. T. B. Catron should receive the vote of every loyal citizen of this city and county on election day. He is a very strong friend and defender of this city and county and has been so for 30 years, as his record in every public position he has ever filled, and in private life, fully and unequivocally proves. Home interests, in addition to many other good and sound reasons, demand that Mr. Catron be elected for the position for which he has been nominated, namely, member of the council from this county.

The debonaire manner which characterized the opening of the campaign by the Democrats has entirely disappeared. Things are not what they seemed to be a few weeks ago, and there is mourning in the camp of the free traders. Hon. Pedro Perea has proved a candidate of the people and is setting a rapid pace by his aggressive and progressive campaign. The best interests of the territory demand the election of a Republican delegate and a Republican majority in the 33d legislative assembly and the voters of the territory realize that fact and will vote in accordance with that view.

The Republican legislative and county ticket for Santa Fe county is as good a ticket as can possibly be nominated. Every candidate on the ticket is well and favorably known, and is fully competent for the position for which nominated. The candidates are property owners, tax payers and citizens who have the welfare of the county at heart. The good citizens of this county can well afford to vote for the ticket as it is, man for man, and elect it and they will be sure of a good, clean and efficient county government and able and hard working representatives in the 33d legislative assembly.

The Democratic ticket nominated last Saturday in this city and placed before the voters of the county, cannot, in all truth, be called a good or a strong ticket. Three-fourths of the ticket is weak, and this part consists of men who were in with the old Democratic gang in this county, that piled up a greater part of the large debt of the county and that robbed the county in many directions. This cannot be successfully contradicted, and the citizens of this county know this to be so. Hence common sense, business and political interests require that the Republican ticket in this county, from the head to the foot, be given a handsome majority on November 8th, next.

What a glorious record Mr. Ferguson made in congress when the debate on the Dingley tariff was on. He was granted time to make a speech wherein he was to set forth the great interest New Mexico wool growers had in the passage of a section that would protect the wools raised in the territory, and the great necessity for such action on the part of congress. He got in a few words when the terra cotta schedule was up and talked about third class wools and wanted protection for them, when under the provisions of the bill then before the house and in the law as finally enacted, New Mexico wools are graded as first and second class wools. That was great, and it is very easy to figure out how much good he did New Mexico's interests in the matter.

Captain Maximiliano Luna, Republican candidate for the 33rd Legislative Assembly from Valencia County.

Captain Maximiliano Luna, Republican candidate for the house of representatives of the 33d legislative assembly from Valencia county, was born in Los Lunas June 16, 1870, and received his education in the Las Vegas college, and in Georgetown college, District of Columbia. On completing his studies in the latter institution, he received an appointment to the naval academy at Annapolis. Just as he was ready to enter upon his studies at that institution his mother's death occurred, which changed all his plans. He made a tour of Cuba in 1889 and then returned to his home in Valencia county, where he has since remained.

CAPTAIN MAXIMILIANO LUNA.

In 1890 he was appointed interpreter of the 2d judicial district of the territory, and in 1891 he served as chief clerk of the council of the 29th legislative assembly. In 1892 he was elected probate clerk and ex-officio county clerk of Valencia, an office he held until 1894, when he was elected sheriff of the county. In these different positions Captain Luna made an enviable record. The duties of the various positions were attended to promptly, carefully and in a business like manner, and he rapidly acquired strength and position in Valencia county. In the fall of 1896 he was nominated by the Republicans as their candidate for the house of representatives of the 32d legislative assembly and was elected by a handsome majority. During the session of the legislature in 1897, he was one of the recognized Republican leaders in the house and his services were of the highest order, proving of benefit to the entire territory.

While Captain Luna has occupied a conspicuous place in the affairs of the territory almost from boyhood, it was not until the war with Spain began that the qualities which he possessed were really brought out. When the president issued the first call for volunteers he came to Santa Fe and offered his services to Governor Otero. The governor commissioned him a captain in the now famous regiment of Rough Riders, and at once began the work of recruiting his company, succeeding in securing the requisite number of good men in a very few days. From the day he received his commission to his return home after mustering out, his army services were marked with ability and efficiency. In the fighting around Santiago de Cuba, in that wonderful charge up San Juan heights, and in the trenches during the long days of the armistice, during the pendency of the surrender of the city and province of Santiago to the United States by the Spanish, Captain Luna was in the front. In recognition of his valiant services General Wood transferred the captain to his staff, and after the surrender appointed him one of the commission to examine into the condition of Spanish prisons in the province. As a staff officer and as a commissioner he proved himself the right man in the right place and added much to the fame gained in the battles which have brought such renown to his regiment.

When the Republican convention of Valencia county was held the members of the party again turned to Captain Luna as one of the best and most available candidates for the legislature and he consented to make the race. As Valencia is the banner Republican county in New Mexico, his election is assured, but his popularity, his peculiar fitness for the office and his standing as a citizen and a soldier, will bring to him a very large vote in the county any day, and the New Mexican predicts that his work in the coming session of the legislature will add to his standing and reputation in every part of New Mexico.

Frank Staplin, Republican Candidate for the house of the 33rd Legislative Assembly from the 8th District.

Frank Staplin, the Republican candidate for the house of the 33d legislative assembly from Taos, Rio Arriba and San Juan counties, was born in Chicago, Ill., July 4, 1873. In 1879 he went with his parents to Huerfano county, Colorado, and made his home near La Veta. He received his education in the public schools of La Veta and also attended the Tolletson academy in Trinidad.

Mr. Staplin's first attempt in journalism was in 1892, when he edited and published at La Veta the Huerfano Informer, a Republican campaign paper, which did good work for the party during the warm and interesting times when the Populists were in power in Colorado. In 1895 he came to New Mexico and engaged in mining and prospecting at Amizett, in Taos county, and later was connected with the Amizett Miner, which was published a few months at that place. Owing to the extremely hard times and state of panic which prevailed in the mining districts in the territory under a Democratic administration, the prospectors at Amizett were unable to procure the means with which to develop the district, and one by one they emigrated to the agricultural districts, to remain until a change in political and financial conditions should be brought about and restore the opportunities for developing their properties and making their efforts profitable, and the Amizett Miner went the way of thousands of other papers. Mr. Staplin having come to the territory with the intention of becoming a permanent resident, then tried pincer mining on the Rio Grande, which proved remunerative, and several other ventures, which were equally as successful.

In April, 1896, he went to La Belle, where he was employed by the La Belle Publishing Company, and in July of the same year he became the editor and manager of the Cresset. At La Belle he has become interested in several mining companies and is now the secretary of the Boston Gold Mining Company and the Houston Gold Mining and Milling Company, both of La Belle, and is interested in several other local enterprises. He also holds the responsible position of local agent for the La Belle district of the United States Freehold and Immigration Company, the owner of the Castillo estate, a tract of land situated in southern Colorado northern northern New Mexico, of over 500,000 acres, and originally a part of the Sangre de Christo grant.

During the last two campaigns the Cresset and Mr. Staplin, personally, have supported the local Democratic ticket, believing such a course to be for the best interests of Taos county, but like a large number of Republicans in the county who have pursued the same course, he has become convinced of the folly of Democracy in local, as well as territorial and national affairs, and has returned to his first political love.

The Cresset has recently moved to Taos, where it is ably supporting the entire Republican ticket and advocating the principles of that party, as well as promoting the interests of the community and county—something never before accomplished by a paper in Taos county. Mr. Staplin will make a strong race in the 8th legislative district, which has heretofore been Democratic, but this year there is no doubt that each of the three counties comprising the district will give a substantial majority for the Republican ticket in its entirety.

Good Reasons for Mr. Perea's Election.

The future welfare of New Mexico depends upon the election of a Republican delegate. We dropped back two years ago into the same class with Nevada and Colorado. Not being able to line up in the progressive ranks of Republicanism in the election of 1896, we lost station for us in the last congress and if we make the same mistake again in this election we will forfeit all hopes of obtaining statehood for an indefinite time. The Republican party has control of all branches of the national government at the present time, and will surely retain that control for a number of years to come, as the Democratic party is practically without an issue with which to go before the people. The improved condition of business affairs during the last 18 months of Republican administration has been an object lesson to the people that they will not soon forget. And if New Mexico expects to keep up with the procession she must elect Pedro Perea for delegate.

LEXINGTON PEOPLE

Courtesies Extended to Soldier Boys at Camp Hamilton—Dinners and Carriage Rides.

NEWSPAPER OFFICES VISITED

Numerous Accomplished Journalists Met—Latch Strings Dangle for the Boys in Blue—Kindness and Generosity of Kentuckians Praised.

Various members of the Lexington press and others, are entitled to my sincere thanks for courtesies, embracing dinners, theater tickets, carriage rides to points of interest, etc. The historic and scenic features of this locality are very interesting. High bridge is a famous structure which spans the Kentucky river 215 feet above its bed. It is not quite so high as the price of butter and eggs, but it well worth seeing. The insane asylum, where "I saw my finish," as Kentucky slang words, is a nice place. The inmates admired my blue uniform and expressed deep sympathy for the soldiers in camp. Their solicitude moved me deeply. They seem to realize that they are better cared for than soldiers. Clay monument is a thing of just pride to all Kentuckians. When Mr. Clay died the Kentuckians thought that the race of smart men became extinct. No one living was deemed competent to prepare an appropriate epitaph and the monument was decorated with an inscription taken from one of Mr. Clay's speeches. From the tone of the inscription I judge that Mr. Clay was a very able man—almost as self sacrificing as Rev. Sam Small. I visited numerous other places, old land marks and antique houses, and was then shown a copy of the Lexington Gazette.

Mr. Gratz, proprietor of the Gazette, has treated me with unusual consideration, and I feel constrained to say a word about his publication. It is said to be one of the oldest newspapers in Lexington. I have forgotten just how old, but it cut its eye teeth about the time Washington cut the cherry tree. The Gazette has a large circulation in the agricultural profession, and its columns are largely devoted to farm hints. One can secure all manner of useful information from the Gazette. Everything from the proper time to plant homestead and pure corn, down to the most esthetic manner in which to scald skimmers and suck hard boiled eggs can be found in its well edited columns.

Mr. Gratz has never used a patent inside. This is probably because he takes good care of his health and don't need one. Nor has he ever permitted a patent medicine advertisement to appear in his paper. The jokes and "hints to housewives" are all newly laid and sterilized. No "tin horn" can secure favorable mention in the Gazette and a man must have a pedigree longer than the Georgetown pike or his political aspirations will not be considered. It is a nice, clean newspaper—the kind I intend to publish when I reach heaven.

The Morning Herald is another newspaper which was established in some year B. C. It has a bifurcated record, caused by swallowing several other papers, and is a breezy, up-to-date daily, backed by the rank and file of Kentucky aristocracy. A list of its staff officers over the editorial column is a feature which causes the column to resemble the vertebrae of an Arizona cactus. As most of the names sound well, I judge them to belong to members of good families and that is sufficient to cause the Herald to circulate well in Kentucky.

I note the name of W. C. P. Breckinridge in the capacity of president of the Herald Publishing Company. This reminds me that company G of our regiment was recently called on to assist in firing the queen's jubilee salute in honor of his brother, General J. C. Breckinridge. The queen's jubilee salute, as I understand it, is not necessarily confined to saluting queens, nor is it a time of justification. In fact, one need not be more than a trump vet spot, in army circles, to receive the salute. The ceremony is a sort of inverted funeral procession, with a Chinese lantern and barbecue trimmings. After the salute is fired, every one present eats—except the soldiers—and the other generals smoke good cigars and throw bouquets of oratory at the retiring general. Then they seek their tents and pray that their own jobs may be left until warm weather sets in. And Jones pays the freight on the ammunition used.

Seriously, though, General Breckinridge still retains the respect and love of the Kentucky people and western volunteers, regardless of the military act which deprived him of leadership. The Evening Argonaut is another daily newspaper which publishes all the news and molds public opinion for 5 cents. The Argonaut is cheap at that, for it is a well edited, breezy publication. I do not know enough about the personal characteristics of the staff to elaborate further, but I am informed that they are members of the various Kentucky temperance societies and in good standing.

Unfortunately, I missed the opportunity of getting acquainted with the Leader staff. I invaded the sacred precincts of the editorial room one day, but did not make myself known. The editor bears a striking resemblance to Colonel Billy Bryan, and I was afraid to address him. I thought perhaps he might bombard me with a free silver tirade, so I beat a hasty retreat and climbed the stairs to the composing room, hoping to find some one who appeared as though he possessed a little intellect as myself. I finally found one. He was running around in his shirt sleeves and I thought perhaps he was the office devil. But my judgment was at fault, for he informed me that he was Mr. Nichols, the foreman. My conversational powers were keyed to their highest pitch and I thought of many bright things to say, among them "Will you come down and join me in a drink?" Mr. Nichols don't drink, and my conversation fell flat. However, he is a very nice man and a versatile printer. He is an artist, steno typewriter, printer and Mergenthaler operator all in one. I believe he can also talk German, play the piano, sing, and manipulate a chaffing dish. He does more than any one else around the establishment and should have his wages raised. On the landing I saw a man dressed in blue overalls, whom I thought was the janitor. I was tempted to ask him why he didn't get out of the place or start the elevator running so that visitors could get about the building more easily, but checked myself in time. He might have been Mr. Breckinridge or the owner of the building. Since I once mistook a Chicago bunco stealer for a Methodist preacher, I have ceased to take pride in my ability to ascertain a man's calling by his personal appearance.

I must not forget to thank Mr. Oliver Redd for sundry square meals, social affairs and invitations to call again. Mr. Redd and his estimable wife are very hospitable people and royal entertainers. Lieutenant Catron and I attempted to hold our own with a parlor full of ladies at the Redd home one night last week. While we were not entirely successful, we enjoyed ourselves and the Welsh rarebit hugely. Mr. Oliver Redd served with Hon. T. B. Catron during the "late unpleasantness" and has an enviable war record. Mr. Samuel Redd is an old time New Mexico stock raiser, and is familiar with every range and cow path in the territory. Mr. Richard Redd is arranging to give a fox hunt for the benefit of our popular lieutenant. As will be noted from the above, there are several Redds around Lexington; in fact, enough to paint the town, that popular color. However, they are a credit to the section and merit the highest praise for kindness and generosity.

The latch string of their door is always dangled for hungry soldiers. We intend to hire a derrick to pull us out of the mud at Camp Hamilton and visit the Redds again soon.

TRUTHFUL JAMES.
